

Mentor Walk

The Sandy Springs-based nonprofit Campus Community Partnership Foundation recently hosted its second Mentor Walk on the Agnes Scott College campus in Decatur. The event encouraged students to stay in school and set goals for themselves. Older students are paired up as mentors to younger students, mentees, at the walk. The program also is designed to build social responsibility in college students. Left, from left, Carolyn Young, the namesake for the Carolyn Young Mentor Walk, and Kashi Sehgal, the program director. Above, Lt. Gov. Casey Cagle speaks about mentoring and health.

Special Photos

Dr. Rich DeMillo, a Campus Community Partnership Foundation board member and a professor of computing and director of Georgia Tech's Center for 21st Century Universities, speaks about the Mentor Walk as an example of a program of 21st Century University.

Above, Carolyn Young talks about education and mentoring. Below, Agnes Scott College President Elizabeth Kiss welcomes guests and speaks about the partnership between the college and the Campus Community Partnership Foundation.

Student mentors and mentees participate in the Carolyn Young Mentor Walk.

Ambassador Andrew Young, a Campus Community Partnership Foundation board member, speaks at the track.

From left, District 5 U.S. Rep. John Lewis, D-Atlanta, walking with Walter, a mentee participant.